

Dr Dawne Irving-Bell

Shout about your SoTL!

November 2021

The Courage to SoTL

The Courage to SoTL

- Know who you are!
- Leave your modesty at the door
- What's your everyday scholarship story?
- How do you make a difference?

○ Little things make a big difference

○ Small stuff = big impact

Creating an impactful narrative around your practice

Creating AND measuring impact

Layers of practice to build evidence of your impact

- Shout about your brilliance!
- Articulate the evidence
- Make the invisible visible

- Find your tribe - collaborative brain
- Seek help from those further along the path

○ Get involved...
○ exploring SoTL opportunities

○ Journal publication
○ Interest groups
○ Conference presentation
○ Writing groups

What is the NTR?

- Easy to share, no need to register
- Updates without losing metrics
- Signpost to other spaces

How can you get involved?

- Build your Scholarship profile
- Evidence impact with Metrics
- Share work in various formats

Follow on Twitter: @NTRepository

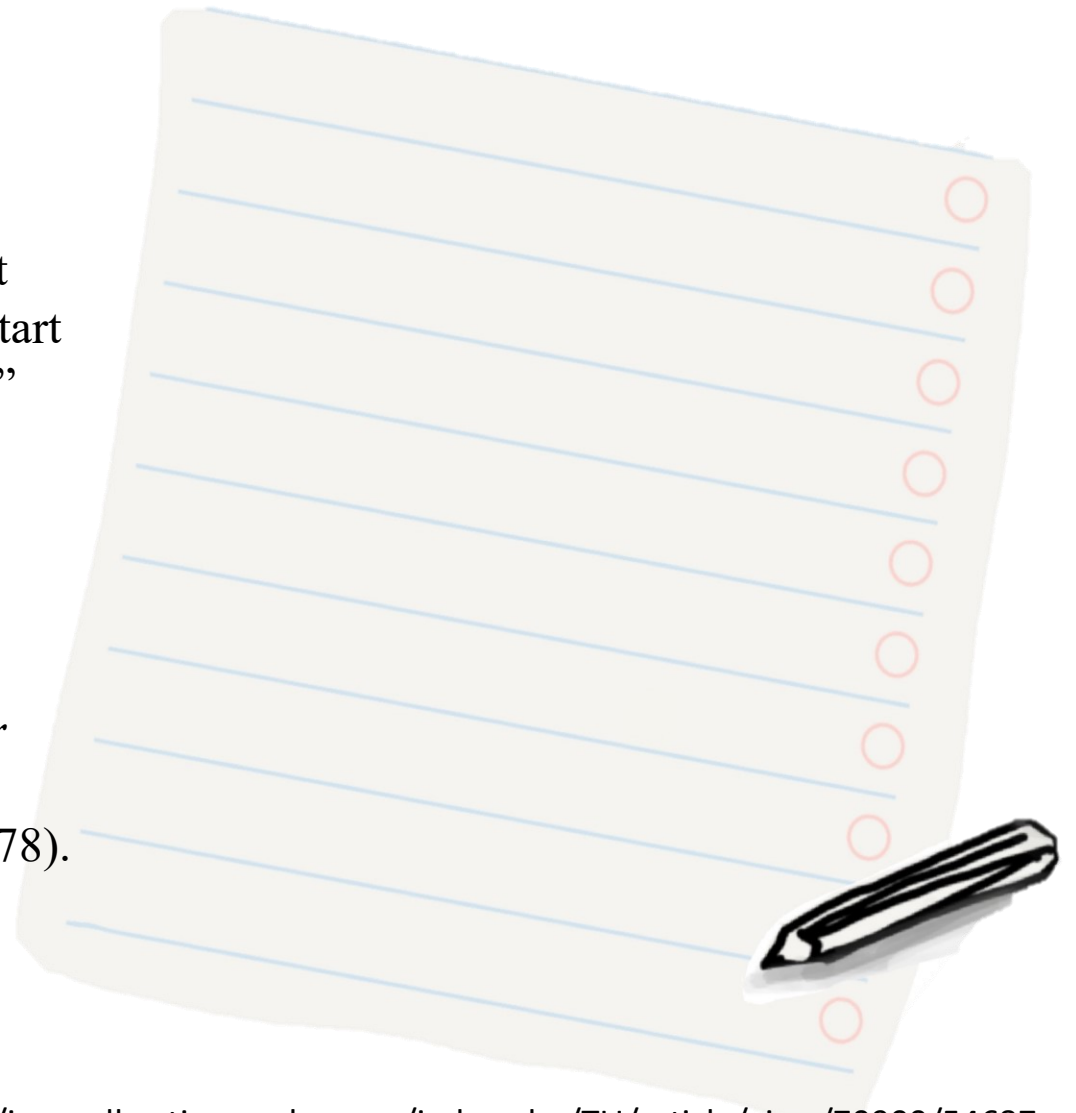

The Courage to SoTL

Think back to the moment you decided to go into the field of education and try to remember when you felt joy in your heart and soul. Find your people, build your coalition, and help to start a movement. The title of the paper is “The Courage to SOTL,” because it takes courage to decide to live an undivided life, knowing the implications it may have:

“No punishment anyone lays on you could possibly be worse than the punishment you lay on yourself by conspiring in your own diminishment”

(Palmer 2007, 178).

Thank you for listening

Any questions?

Belld@edgehill.ac.uk @belld17

